Dedication

Add your dedication. Be it as a quotation, a whole paragraph written in the form of a letter to thank people who helped with the book, or as a short statement like “To my parents.”

Introduction

Here you can write an introductory paragraph that sets the theme of the book. It does not necessarily have to describe what the book is about; it can also be a significant quote.

Índice general

Dedication	v
Introduction	vii
Foreword	xi
Preface	xiii

Foreword

“ Feel free to add a quote here that sets the theme for the production of this book. I sometimes write about how I feel about the progress of releasing a new book.

The publisher's note can be about giving the reader the context of other books the company has published, how this book was produced, and contact points (email, website, etc.) for the reader to report issues or ask questions.

It can also be written by an expert in the field in which you are writing (e.g., science, art, philosophy, etc.).

Preface

“ Feel free to add a quotation that describes your journey as the author of the book. Something personal is good.

Describe how you arrived at the idea for writing the book and the personal journey of getting it from concept to creation. The reader should be able to understand why the book exists.

Also, give a short overview of what the book is about.
